2. Early in July 1952, Hulubei was visited by an East German (DDR) scientist. During the meeting, Hulubei revealed sharp disagreement with the present government of Rumania and strongly criticized conditions in general. In particular, he expressed annoyance with the enforced isolation of all Rumanian scientists, complaining that it was not only impossible for a scientist to correspond with any colleagues abroad, but with scientists in other Eastern Bloc nations as well. Scientific literature from abroad is practically non-existent in Rumania, and scientific relations with the Soviet Union are so meager that they do not begin to compensate for the lack of exchange with Western researchers.

4. In the course of his criticism, Hulubei remarked that several bloody uprisings by peasants took place in the country when farms were forcibly collectivized. He stated that this was true despite Rumanian Government protests that such reports were Western inventions.
